

How are the British Values developed in Music?

- Democracy
- Rule of Law
- Individual Liberty
- Mutual respect

Across the music curriculum, children have opportunities to explore a range of musical genres and styles. The composition element of music to the curriculum, allows children to explore their individual liberty and make their own musical choices. They are also encouraged to perform to one another and collaborate; in doing so, treating each other with mutual respect.

Our music curriculum offers the children opportunities to explore their Spiritual, Moral, Social and Cultural development, and in turn, consider a democratic view and a tolerance of those with different faiths and beliefs through the medium of music. Through the curriculum, the children explore the concept that stories can be told through songs and is often a medium for expression of personal, political and cultural views.
